Proposed Rulemaking Comment Period

The comment period is now open for the draft Oregon Administrative Rules regarding the minimum conditions for public libraries (HB2243). During the 2019 legislative session, OLA Legislative Committee and Amanda Dalton, OLA Lobbyist, worked with legislators to establish minimum conditions that a public library must meet to be officially recognized by the State Library as a public library. After passage of HB2243, the State Library in collaboration with the Administrative Rules Advisory Committee drafted the rules with specific minimum conditions and the process to support the legislation.

State Library of Oregon attends the National Book Festival

State Library staff members, Jennifer Graves, Robby Pietz and Erich Peppler, attended the National Book Festival in Washington, D.C. on August 31, 2019. They took part in the festival’s Parade of States, where representatives from each state shared with attendees what makes their state so great and any books they are highlighting.

This year we highlighted the book, Roller Girl, by Victoria Jamieson. Based in Portland, OR, this Newbery Honor Award Winner and New York Times bestseller, tells the story of Astrid who falls in love with the roller derby and dreams of becoming a roller girl. In this graphic novel debut from real-life roller girl, Victoria Jamieson has created an inspiring coming-of-age story about friendship, perseverance, and girl power! In addition to sharing this wonderful book, the staff members shared with attendees, maps, travel guides and handed out wristbands with a special message, “I Love Oregon”.

The State Library would like to thank the National Book Festival for providing such a great opportunity to connect with fellow bookworms and share with them about Oregon. Also, a very special thank you to Heart Sticker Company at www.heartsticker.com for allowing us to use the Heart in Oregon Sticker design on the wristbands. They were a big hit! We ran out of 1600 wristbands in just 5 hours! This year was such a huge success, we look forward to next year.
Staying with relatives during times of family transition can be a real challenge, especially for teens who end up in a small town with lots of idle time. In one Oregon public library, providing access to LearningExpress Library’s GED test preparation tools was a great way to keep one such teen occupied. Word spread and the librarian found herself helping another family member access other resources for building skills in reading, writing, and math.

Across Oregon, libraries are finding ways to entice local teens into the library by helping them think about their future and use the career exploration and college entrance exam preparation materials in LearningExpress Library. Libraries with limited budgets can find up-to-date and interactive practice tests for a wide range of tests including for SAT, ACT and other occupational certification tests.
Want to make sure your teens know about this free resource? Add LearningExpress Library to your library web page, or better yet, promote it on your social media accounts, especially around test-taking times!

LearningExpress Library is made available to Oregon libraries at no cost through the Statewide Database Licensing Program. For more information or questions contact Arlene Weible.

Online Training Resources

The State Library would like to remind our wonderful library community that we are offering the following statewide for free: Ryan Dowd’s Training on Homelessness for Libraries and Trustees Training from United for Libraries.

Training on Homelessness for Libraries includes videos, resources, and tools to help staff reduce problems and conflict, while still being inclusive. Staff at public libraries interact with almost as many homeless individuals as staff at shelters do. Empathy and understanding, along with specific actionable advice that's drawn from experience, makes all the difference in working with this group. Filled with to-the-point guidance that will help front line public library staff and managers understand and serve this population better, this resource

- includes facts about homelessness every librarian should know;
- shares de-escalation techniques like showing respect, ways to avoid making things personal, and using proper body language;
- walks readers through dealing with common issues like offensive behavior and asking a patron to leave; and
- advises on how to provide backup to a colleague and when to call the police.

Training on Homelessness for Libraries is free to all Oregon school, academic, tribal, and public library staff, volunteers, and board members. Please see our Online CE Resources web page for how to register for this resource.
Short Takes for Trustees are 8-10 minute videos that can be shown during Trustee meetings to stimulate discussion about the important role that Trustees play in the governance of their libraries while the Trustee Academy is a series of online courses to help Trustees become exceptionally proficient in their roles on behalf of their libraries. These online courses are taught by a professional in the field. For more information please visit our Online CE Resources web page for more information and how to register!

Government Services helps with Board of Examiners for Engineering and Land Surveying 100th Anniversary

The Oregon State Board of Examiners for Engineering and Land Surveying (OSBEELS) celebrated their 100th anniversary this summer. The mission of OSBEELS is to regulate the practices of engineering, land surveying, photogrammetric mapping, and water right examination in the State as they relate to the welfare of the public in safeguarding life, health and property. They contacted the Government Information and Library Services Division to find some of their earlier publications and ask for them to be digitized. The Government Services Division is always happy to partner with state agencies to help prioritize the large project of digitizing all of the Oregon Documents Collection. Currently about 18% of the 106,000 Oregon Documents collection is digitized. The Digitization Workgroup was able to scan the Biennial report of OSBEELS to the Governor and Legislature from 1921-1996 and make them available online in the State Library’s Digital Collections. Various other documents can be found on the OSBEELS Collection page including a STEM coloring book, the Oregon Examiner.
newsletter, and brochures on land surveying with drones. The Digitization Workgroup is busy scanning the rest of the documents published by OSBEELS and will have them available online soon!

Talking Book and Braille Library 50th Anniversary at the State Library Series: Building Changes
CAUTION: CONSTRUCTION ZONE. Get your hard hats on, because this last segment celebrating the Talking Book and Braille Library’s 50th anniversary at the State Library will highlight the significant building changes that have impacted the library over the years.

The Talking Book and Braille Library started out in a facility at 432 Church St SE, which is located by what is now the SAIF building to the south of downtown Salem. In 1975, that facility flooded, and the following year the Talking Book and Braille Library was moved to a building at Marion and 13th St (now a Safeway). The new facility was also able to accommodate a growing collection. In 1985, the Talking Book and Braille Library was called home, moving into the State Library building itself, where it has remained to this day.

In June 1988, a reading room opened full of resources for registered users. The purpose of the room was to provide users with a place to get hands-on experience with the latest in accessible technology, including four computers with speech output, large type output, and a Braille interface keyboard. Users could also browse new audio or Braille books, and there were study/meeting spaces. Much of the equipment in the reading room was purchased with grant monies, and the renovation plans were drawn up pro bono by a local architect. The room has been repurposed since then, but at the time it was one-of-a-kind!

In spring 1990, work on the Capitol Mall Parking Structure began, and would continue through spring 1991. Access to the Talking Book and Braille Library was limited during construction, but the result was a much more handicapped accessible Capitol Mall, including increased handicapped parking and remodeled entrances with ramps. And don’t forget the lovely cherry blossom trees!

From summer 1998 through summer 1999, the State Library underwent some major renovations in order to make the building more earthquake safe, install an AC system, and improve staff work areas. The entire Talking Book and Braille Library had to be relocated to the south end of the building, which meant suspending operations for a whole month! The end result, however, was a totally redesigned work area that provided greater efficiency and an on-site repair facility.

Finally, in 2013 the Talking Book and Braille Library’s office space was reduced by a whopping 40%. The transition from cassettes to digital media meant less space was needed, and several circulation processes were able to be condensed into the stacks where they would be closer to the books. The room where the Telephone Pioneers had repaired cassette machines was remodeled to be more open, and the room itself was also dedicated that August to the Telephone Pioneers to honor their decades of exceptional service.

It has been great fun researching and sharing these glimpses of the past 50 years with the statewide library community, and be sure to follow the #TalkingBookTuesday social media campaign on the State Library's Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram accounts (@statelibraryor) for more even tidbits every week through the end of the year. Here is to 50 great years, and (hopefully) 50 more!
